more of their rights.

We have been told for a long time that Russia is anti-God. But how much more anti-God is Russia than the United States if the law is going to say that teachers and children cannot pray to God in school? The Supreme Court itself has always opened its sessions with prayer. Congress has done the same. If it is unconstitutional to open classes in school with prayer, how come it isn't unconstitution al to open Supreme Court and Congress sessions with prayer?

There is utterly no organised.

Congressman George Andrews of the Third District of Alabama summed it up in a few words when he said, "They put the Negroes in the schools but now they're driven God out!" I am convinced that all of us, all races and creeds, better be praying that we may have our liberty restored to us, and that we may be permitted every one in his own way to move on in the pursuit of Happiness as our Founding Fathers intended before the Supreme Court takes it all away from us.

There is utterly no argument in supporting or forc. ng children to pray in hool. None in support of orcing teachers or anybody else to pray in school or else_ where. To pray or not to pray is a matter between the ndividual and his God. the United States is fast becoming equally as anti-Goo as we have been told Russia
